

Network Status is very interconnected with location. A device uses a IP Address to connect with local cell towers each at a certain location which sends to location of your Device with the closet cell tower to find the location of the device each with it's own individual IP address. Which the network status changes with location depending on the weather and topography. Also Urban areas have better service while rural areas are often sometimes in dead zones.